QUALITY SURVEY WEBINAR PROMOTING EMPLOYEE'S GREEN BEHAVIOR THROUGH GREEN HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGEMENT

DR SERENE
School of Management and Marketing
Taylor's University

MODERATOR

SYNOPSIS

The environment is indeed in dire state and sustainability is a matter of global debate. Businesses have recently realized that their very existence depends on their level of environmental sustainability, and employees are the main drivers of this transformative initiative. The achievement of environmental performance, which reflects the degree of commitment to protecting the natural environment by organizations, relies on employee behavioral collaboration with the environmental goal of the organization. Hence, this webinar explores the importance of employee contributions to the process, and the key role of green human resource management practices in encouraging green behavior among employees.

ABOUT OUR SPEAKER

Prof. Dr. Yusliza Mohd Yusoff received her PhD in administrative science from Universiti Teknologi MARA. She is currently a Professor in Human Resource Management at the Faculty of Business, Economics and Social Development, Universiti Malaysia Terengganu. Professor Yusliza has presented papers at various international and national conferences and published more than 100 articles in peer-reviewed international journals. Her research interests are organizational and behavioural studies, green human resource management, international HRM (international students adjustment), electronic HRM, line managers' involvement in HRM, employees' empowerment, human resource roles and competencies.

SYNOPSIS

In the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, sustainable and inclusive growth are essential for both organizations and economies to not only survive but also thrive. We firmly believe that the trend towards sustainability, specifically the "green" movement, will remain a top priority for organizations in order to remain competitive. In order to create socially responsible, resource-efficient, and environmentally sensitive organizations, it is critical to shift employee mindsets and behaviors. This process is especially important during the COVID-19 recovery period. To achieve this, human resource managers must consider adopting green human resource practices that increase employee commitment and awareness regarding the issue of sustainability. By doing so, organizations can create a positive and effective work environment that promotes sustainable and inclusive growth, which is critical for long-term success.
